LONDON, November 15.—Prisoners of war in Germany and Austria are quite as well treated as in England, according to C. P. Anderson and Chandler Hale, special representatives of the State Department at Washington, who have been officially inspecting all concentration camps of both belligerents.

"Our report of the British camps, as you know, was most favorable," said Anderson "The other side is entitled to a similar verdict. Indeed, there is very little difference, if any, in the Persian, which was formerly in the possession of the Rasians, who were defeated and fied.
